HOW TO ASK FOR FEEDBACK
have conversations that help improve your work

1 find a friend to help
Grab a friend, family member, or classmate to give you feedback.

2 ask for first impressions
Have helpers tell you what is meaningful, interesting, and exciting, about your work.

3 ask questions
Next, ask helpers specific questions. When answering, helpers should stay on topic about what you asked.

Example: Do you think the fins on the rocket are too big or too small?

4 answer neutral questions
Now helpers can ask you questions without judgement or opinion.

Example: What was your reasoning for using tape to adhere the fins?
NOT > >> Do you want it to fall apart? Tape will never hold.

5 ask for opinions
Last, ask for opinions. Before expressing an opinon, have helpers ask if you want an opinion on that topic. You can answer yes or no.

Example: Would you like my opinion on your parachute mechanism?

Adapted from Liz Lerman’s Critical Response Process
lizlerman.com/critical-response-process/